

Welcome President Sirleaf to ABC University

Visit to ABC University Liberia by President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf

“As we entered the ABC University campus I felt a rush of adrenaline, a surge of excitement of what Liberia could become...”

This is how President Sirleaf began her speech in the newly restored ABCU Chapel. The beauty of the campus was a testimony to her and to the whole nation of what God has done.

Her closing words were: “This campus impresses upon us how restoration can transform.”

Anyone who has experienced God’s power of transformation knows the ripple effect it can have.

ABCU was truly honored to be visited by a leader of such international acclaim. Our prayer was that she and her entourage of cabinet members, legislators and diplomats would be encouraged and inspired to continue on this path of peace.

The fact that she chose to visit ABCU indicates her appreciation for higher Christian education as we “plant oaks of righteousness” by training women and men of integrity.

We noticed God’s upside down Kingdom values during her visit. The little campus of ABCU sits in the middle of the concession area of Arcelor Mittal – a billion dollar enterprise and one of the largest mining companies in the world. Yet the President did not come to see the mining operation but this small Christian university that produces reputable leaders. Once again God chooses something small (like a Bethlehem) to say something big.

Samaritans Purse, work teams of local churches and churches in the U.S. were recognized as major contributors towards the development of this campus that has quickly been transformed from a shameful state to one fit for a visit by a head of state.
